Tells Value of Soil Service

U. S. Soil Conservation Service

Something more than material benefit is impelling American landowners and operators to become conservation farmers or ranchers. Something more than the stablished fact that soil and water conservation increases farm buying power is motivating businessmen and countless others to support conservation work.

A farmer or rancher finds pleasure in the beauty of his conservation-treated fields, pastures, woodlands, and wildlife areas. And I feel that all the rest of us share his pleasure as we drive by or fly over his acres; or, when we're extra fortunate, have a chance to feel healthy soil or vigorous sod beneath our feet, or join the owner in harvesting a wildlife crop more abundant now than a few years ago.

But there is another important motivating force for conservation. I believe it is the fast-growing realization in every community I know about that wise use and treatment of soil is a moral responsibility — that soil is a gift of the Creator, and that we, all of us, have a steward responsibility for it.

Unless we pause to consider the spiritual man, we may be amazed by this spread of the soil stewardship concept in a time when we are troubled by temporary crop surpluses and when only one person in 25 actually tills the soil for a living.

Unless we accept as a fact that men do recognize the spiritual values of soil and water conservation, we are unable to explain fully the personal sacrifices thousands of them make to serve as members of the governing boards of nearly 2,700 locally organized and managed Soil Conservation Districts. These men—and there are some women on these governing boards already are conservation farmers or ranchers. They already are, personally, reaping the material benefits of greater net income, lower production costs, and greater efficiency in the use of labor and machinery that comes with conservation.

But these local leaders cannot, and do not, expect material gain from their services as District supervisors, commissioners, or directors. They receive no salaries. In some states, they are not even reimbursed in part for their expenses.

They surely must be motivated by the truth of the Psalmist's words "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof...." They are heeding the Creators command, when He placed man in the Garden of Eden, "to dress it and to keep it."

I believe that the technicians of the Soil Conservation Service have this same conception. How else could he explain the countless extra hours, beyond the call of duty, which they devote to soil and water conservation?

And, throughout the nation, ministers are providing the spiritual leadership of soil stewardship. Thousands of them each year take soil stewardship as the text of sermons, and provide a continuing leadership among their congregations for recognition that the earth truly is the Lord's.

To those of us who are soil conservationists by profession as well as by conviction, this expanding conception of soil stewardship is indeed heartening.

For we know that man and the soil remain inseparable, all technological and cultural advances notwithstanding.

Man still obtains his food and most of his clothing and shelter from the dust of the earth. And this "dust of the earth," when kept in the balance in which it was created, is a wonderful composite of mineral and myriads of living, decaying plants and animals. It is a storehouse of abundance for past, present, and future generations — a tremendous reservoir to trap and store for use more of the water which at one time may come in raging floods and at another season become insufficient for the needs of thirsty crops, animals, cities, and industries, and man himself.

Love'em

A man was justifiably proud of his lawn until one year a heavy crop of dandelions appeared. He tried everything imaginable in an effort to get rid of them, but without success.

Finally, in desperation, he wrote to an agricultural college, listing the remedies he had tried, and concluding with the appeal: "What shall I do now?"

Several weeks later he received this reply: "We suggest that you learn to love them."

Youth is a blunder; manhood a struggle; old age a regret.

Appomattox Native Adopts Austrian Children

ABOVE: Mrs. Duane R. Barney holds two adopted Austrian infants and their New Jersey adopted son, Larry, 4, look on admiringly. Mrs. Barney is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Cawthorne, of East Orange, N. J., formerly of Appomattox, and sister of Mrs. E. A. Covington, Appomattox. They now live in Whippany, N. J.

(From Newark, N. J. Sunday News)

Whippany.- When Mr. and Mrs. Duane R. Barney decided they wanted to adopt another child or two, the prospects seemed distant. As it turned out they were an ocean away.

The Barneys, troubled by restrictions on the age limits imposed by domestic adoption authorities, fulfilled their dream through a flying trip to Austria to adopt two infants, a feat made possible by international understanding.

Today, the Barney's Hilltop Circle home is fuller and brighter by the addition of an Austrian boy and girl, chubby and healthy, and each a year old and soon to become American citizens.

SIXTH TOUR OF HALIFAX HOMES

The sixth annual tour of Old Halifax Homes will take place from eleven to five on Wednesday, May 16. These six tours have opened to the public for the first time twenty homes which are more than a century old, besides the ten South Boston homes on the "Gay Nineties Tour" of last year. Since two large brick buildings in Halifax have been torn down in the past year, in the interest of progress, it is well that the path "Backward" take stock of the remaining buildings which have caused this courthouse settlement to be called "the prettiest village in Virginia." Attention is called not only to the five homes and public buildings open this year, but to the exterior of many others.

The drive begins in Banister Town, now the Negro section, at the junction of the Lynchburg and Richmond roads, where sweeping roofs and ancient locks indicate the oldest period of all. The whole village was once called Banister, instead of Halifax Courthouse, the latter landmark having been built by Johnny Cosby in 1832, as were most other buildings. Before turning off Banister Road into Main Street, Route No. 360, on which all the stops are located, attention is called to the Paint Fox - McCormick house on the left, which was built before 1845. After turning, one passes the long W. W. Hankins house, before driving down the short road to the old Halifax School on the left, making a turn there and coming back to this point to park. En route, note "Magnolia Hill," which is not open this year, as it was the first two years of the tour. Samuel Davies Academy, had trustees here in the forties. In 1856 it had as teacher Dr. Jacob Henry Smith, the father of five famous Presbyterians: Dr. Sam Smith, Dr. Hay Watson Smith, Dr. Egbert W. Smith, Dr. C. Alphonso Smith and Dr. Henry Louis Smith.

NEWS FOR VETERANS

Lapsed GI term insurance still may be reinstated before the end of the term period, the Veterans Administration said in answer to numerous inquiries.

VA said it has found that many veterans believe they no longer are entitled to GI insurance when they have missed several premium payments on 5-year term policies.

However, the agency explained, if the 5-year term has not expired, the policies may be reinstated with the payment of two monthly premiums.

A medical examination is required if the policies have been lapsed more than three months. No examination is required if the policies have been lapsed less than three months and the policyholders are in as good health as they were on the date of lapse, VA added.

Any contact office of the Veterans Administration will assist veterans in reinstating GI term insurance.

A.H.S. Newscas

By Peggy Wooten

Hello there!

Speaking of excitment this week, A.H.S. is in a swirl. The Seniors are taking their long-waited for trip to New York. On this trip they will stay at the Hotel Piccadilly. They will visit the Rockefeller Center, Times Square, Empire State Building, Statue of Liberty, Madison Square Garden, Coney Island, Yankee Stadium and many other exciting places such as Radio City Music Hall. There will be 34 students and 4 chaprones going. They will be in New York from Thursday to Sunday. Transportation will be furnished by Trailway Bus Company. Sounds like a wonderful experience, doesn't it.

Tryouts for the F. B. L. A. skit to be given to the Junior Chamber of Commerce in May were held Tuesday. Those chosen for the parts were Ellen Carter, Geraldine Lucado, Margaret, Floyd Fleshman and Wesley Newcomb. This skit is entitled "Boss vs Secretary."

The S. C. A. is planning its installation of officers for the coming year. Those elected were: president, Jack Caldwell; vice - president, Moses Dinkins; secretary, Janice McClenny; treasurer, Anne Abbitt; and reporter, Joella Ferguson. The present officers are president, "Bill" Carson; vice president, Shawn Mabley; secretary and treasurer, Peggy Wooten; and reporter, Lewis McDearmon.

Appomattox High has been receving many honors this year. Virginia Davidson competed in the East Central District 4-H Contest and won first place in Laundry Demonstration. Laura Larson and Gene Carson teamed up to take first place in the Egg Grading Contest, and Winifred Lee won second place in individual Egg Grading. These four will be awarded a trip to the 4-H Short Course at Blacksburg in June to compete for the state awards. Best of luck, "kids."

Carol Myers, a senior, placed Appomattox High School in the State Forensic Speaking Contest last week at Charlotteville where she won third place. Others take other contests were Fo krat, Shawn Mabley and bitt.

Navy Seagoing Specialist

Quartermaster

A ship at sea steams on many courses . . . at many speeds . . . wind and current and normal operating conditions can set the ship off its basic course . . . but how much? That is where the Commanding Officer of a ship uses the Quartermaster to take a bearing to determine the exact location of the ship and when the foreign shores he's heading for will be sighted.

Quartermasters have been important to the running of ships as far back as 1583, when the English Navy became the world's No. 1 seapower. The title is derived from the quartdeck of the old galleon-type ship. Stationed on this deck, the Quartermaster relayed orders from the Captain to the forecastle, and served as assistant to the Officer of the Deck.

Nowadays, the Quartermaster has more specialized duties, but he is still one of the most important men aboard ship. Every morning and night while at sea he and the navigator "shoot the stars." With celestial navigation, they determine exactly where they are in a vast and lonely ocean.

Responsible job? Of course. The safety of a ship at sea depends to a great extent on skillful navigation. Messages and orders must be transmitted quickly and accurately. A careful watch must be maintained for enemy ships and aircraft. An important man, the Quartermaster.

Civilian occupations that parallel the technical skills of a Quartermaster include: Navigator, Weather Forecaster, Deck Officer, Ship Pilot, Dispatcher, Map Maker, Geodetic Computer, and Map Draftsman.

This is only one of over 60 ratings in today's modern Navy.

DEATHS

B. G. Anderson Rites Yesterday

Funeral services for Mr. Bernard Guthrie Anderson, 74, were conducted yesterday at 11 A. M. from Appomattox Court House Presbyterian Church. Burial was in Liberty Cemetery. Mr. Anderson died at his home here at 9:30 A. M. Monday, after an illness of eight years.

Born in Cumberland County on Jan. 22, 1882, he was the son of John A. and Willie Guthrie Anderson. He was a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic institute, in the Class of 1906. He was twice married. His first wife, Anna Gay Guthrie Anderson, passed away some years ago. He is survived by his second wife, Mrs. Ella Smith Anderson, home demonstration agent of Appomattox County; two daughters, Mrs. Lewis McDearmon, of Appomattox, and Miss Mandane Ellis Anderson, of San Antonio, Texas; three brothers, John A. Anderson, of Lynchburg; Francis Sidney Anderson, of Farmville, and J. Ellis Anderson, of Richmond.

Pallbearers were nephews: John A. Anderson Jr., James E. Anderson Jr., Sattler B. Anderson; Charles Crawley, William E. Green, Petus Anderson, Melvin Johns, and Ruben Johns.

Bernard Guthrie Anderson

Bernard Guthrie Anderson came to Appomattox in 1906 as a young man and began his career in a vocation for which he was well qualified, both from the standpoint of technical knowledge and skill and personal traits.

His first position was that of assistant to Mr. W. A. Matthewson, who was superintendent of the local Agricultural Experiment Station, under the U. S. Government. Later Mr. Anderson succeeded Mr. Matthewson and also served as County Agent.

Those were still horse and buggy days, but after a brief space Mr. Anderson purchased a motorcycle to do his traveling and this was quite an inovation, especially among the young people. About two years later he began using an automobile, and this was probably the first automobile in Appomattox County. Others followed rapidly and soon Mr. Anderson was in great demand for his knowledge of how to keep an automobile running. He rendered this service without any charge.

From the beginning of his work, Mr. Anderson showed himself, not only to the prescribed duties of his job, but to the general interests and welfare of Appomattox County. His objectives were always out and beyond the usual call of duty. Of a friendly and helpful disposition, he never forced himself upon anyone or any situation, but was always willing and ready to serve whenever and wherever he saw the opportunity.

To a host of personal friends he was affectionately known and referred to as "B. G.," and it was common knowledge that if work was to be in trouble or need, he was usually the first man on the scene with a kind word and helping hand.

His clear understanding of the agricultural needs and possibilities of Appomattox County, the diligent application of his knowledge and talents to this field of endeavor and his conservative approach to such problems inspired the confidence of the people in his judgment and advice. The results of this cooperative effort could hardly be measured in dollars and cents. It was the beginning of a better day for the farmers of that area and he was truly one of the pioneers in this field.

In all of his walks of life, kind, thoughtful, patient and dependable, whose good nature was often imposed upon, yet withal a firm, and stalwart man whose tolerance never led him to compromise his high principles and noble concepts of right way of life, whose abiding faith in the ultimate confirmation of the promises of God gave him a serenity of purpose and a calm bearing that was a blessing to all who knew him.

Mr. Anderson was a deacon, then an elder, superintendent of the Sunday School, teacher of the Bible Class in the Appomattox Court House Presbyterian Church for a long number of years. He was a Master Mason and member of the Monroe Lodge No. 301, Appomattox. He was a member of the Appomattox County School Board, for several years, and also served as a member of the Local Draft Board during World War II. His services were always in great demand.

In his home, his church, his lodge and to all the other numerous activities to which he was called throughout his long and useful life, there was always that unselfish devotion to the special type of service he felt should be rendered in each particular undertaking, and when the ocasion called for it, he always made a generous contribution of his material resources.

Behind his engaging dignity there was a keen sense of humor and often a twinkle in his eye. To know him was to love him. To work with him was a stimulating and satisfying experience.

He had no liking for sham, pretense or superficiality, but no man ever heard him speak evil of another, either of his own utterance or by quotation. He was a firm believer in the fundamentals of the Christian faith and sought diligently to live by its standards.

His fortitude and uncomplaining nature were never more evident than during his long and trying illness.

Bernard Anderson was a fine gentleman, a good and useful citizen and a loyal friend. Truly a great and noble soul has gone to his just reward.

MR. GEORGE L. KEE

George Lewis Kee, 26, died May 2 in Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D. C., after an illness of three years.

GADGET CUTS GAB

Tabiona, Utah.. An answer to long-winded conversations on party lines, has been provided by the Uintah Basin Telephone Association. It has installed a device in seven Utah communities which warns party-line users at the end of four minutes: "You have one minute to finish your conversation." At the end of that time the connection is automatically cut. Long distance calls are not affected.

WRESTLING MATCHES IN LYNCHBURG

The best collection of talent to make up a professional wrestling card in Lynchburg for several years is due at Lynchburg City Armory on Friday night.

Argentine Rocca, renown as a "lone wolf" in the ring, takes on a partner for the first time in the South and for one of the few times in history, to engage in an Australian tag team match. Rocca and Red Bastein, a lovable "bag of bones" to Lynchburg fans, oppose Mike Paidousis, former University of Tennessee grid star, and Ali Pascha. The match is a best of three falls affair with a 60-minute limit.

Pascha has been dickering for a return match with Rocca since his defeat by the drop-kick artist in Lynchburg several moths ago. Rocca refused outright to meet Pascha a lone but yielded to pressure to engage him in a tag match.

Second place on the card is held by George Becker who tangles with Gino Vagnone, a newcomer to Lynchburg, who weghs 225 pounds and hails from St. Louis. The match is a single fall affair with a 45-minute limit.

Action on the card begins at 8 p. m.
